London Transport Museum	Yes	Yes	Yes	Available for a range of commercial filming and photography opportunities across the Museum in Covent Garden and its little known Depot in Acton. The collection encompasses over 370,000 items including original works of art, vehicles, signs, and much more. Together these form one of the most comprehensive records of urban transport anywhere in the world, and a backdrop for a range of projects. Showing during TV breaks at the moment is the rather fun Experian advert, all of which was filmed at the Depot. And as the festive season approaches its great to look back at last year's Christmas advert from The Outnet. For filming and photography, we have a number of underground carriages available that include the Victoria Line (1967-2011) tube carriage with driver's cabin access, a 1950s-present day Metropolitan line train and a beautifully refurbished 1938 stock with art deco inspired interior. The carriages are excellent for internal and external filming along with a number of buses that include original posters and advertisements. Crews have access to green room facilities, as well as free onsite parking and a dedicated onsite supervisor. Onsite power is available where possible. To discuss any potential projects do get in touch.
